

fedora Activity Day

Looking to get involved in one of the most exciting and dynamic Free and Open Source projects around?

This weekend at Red Hat's main office, members of the Fedora Project's Marketing team will be meeting up to work on Fedora's Marketing Plan for Fedora 14 and beyond. We are looking for anyone with skills including Marketing, art, development and other areas.

If you are interested in joining the Fedora Project this weekend, feel free to let us know, and we can set you up with all of the necessary details. We look forward to hearing from you and seeing you become a member of the leader in Open Source development.

But what if you are not a programmer? Being involved in Open Source is about more than code, we are a vibrant community filled with designers, marketers, translators and many other roles that you can help to fill:

- Work with the Documentation team writing user guides and help, or find a place
- Join the Design or Fonts team, to help shape the look of Fedora using your skills as an artist.
- People person? Take a look at joining the Ambassadors or Marketing teams, freemedia, or one of our support teams.
- Multilingual? You could contribute to our translation team and help spread Fedora to users across the globe.
- Web developer or administrator? Our infrastructure and web teams are looking for people to improve our services.
